2. The air in these rooms has always been a little stuffy, slightly damp. A very specific smell I can't quite place. I feel the cold chair beneath me. It doesn't feel stable like it's only half grounded. Anyway, it wobbles underneath me, almost imperceptibly. Maybe it's just the floor. Just a regular Tuesday in November or December 1987. Just a regular Tuesday in March or April 1997. Just a regular Tuesday in January or February 2001. 2005. 2007. I made sure to wash my hair this morning. I wanted to be the best version of myself. After all, they don't take just anyone for the photo. Head a little to the left, please. Eyes on the camera. A slight smile, maybe? All white.

3. Such a banal moment. But often, the moments that seem banal at first are the ones that aren't. That round eye. Staring, unmoving. I wonder how many faces that eye has already seen. It looks right through me. Not a twitch in the eyelids. Such a banal moment. But often, the moments that seem banal at first are the ones that aren't.

4. You look at her. She smiles. They smile. How many faces? How many faces that look like mine and how many that clearly don't. Faces that don't know who they are right now. Faces that hope the photo doesn't betray them.

5. Soon I'll be just a shadow on polycarbonate. Image after image after image – a reproduction of something we never truly got rid of.
